

HAVE YOUR WINGS BEEN BROKEN?

An advertisement for a necklace. On the left, a small inset image shows a silver necklace with a circular pendant engraved with "GIVE HER WINGS" and a small orange bead. The price is listed as "$39.99 +$5 s/h". The main image shows a silhouette of a person sitting on a swing, with the text "Give Her Wings" in a large, elegant script font. To the right, there is a quote: "forgotten by all we are our sister's keeper give her wings to fly" and the signature "-- risingfromtheashespoetry".

One of my clients once told me a horrible story. She said, "When I was a child, my father would tell us a story about a gentleman who saw someone on a park bench grabbing pigeons and breaking their wings. When the gentleman asked the other man why he would do such a cruel thing, he said he was trying to teach the pigeons that life is not a bed of roses."

Have you ever felt like your wings were cruelly broken by someone else? When that happened, was there anyone out there who cared? Was there anyone who was willing to bandage your wings and provide a safe sanctuary until you healed?

Many abused and battered individuals have experienced such brokenness and need our help.

This week I was introduced to Megan, a woman who was once broken and found healing. Now she wants to help other moms who have been in destructive and abusive marriages find their wings again. She wants broken, bruised and battered women to get a fresh start, and she knows first-hand one of the things they need most is money.

HAVE YOUR WINGS BEEN BROKEN?

To raise funds for their July “person in need,” she is offering this beautiful special edition, sterling silver necklace with freshwater pearl and restored wings. She is hoping to sell 100 necklaces. Selling 100 necklaces means almost $4,000 to help this person in need.

If you would like one (or more) of these necklaces for yourself or to give as a gift to a special woman you know, please go to their website at <http://giveherwings.com/html/currentFundraiser.html> to purchase and read more about this wonderful ministry. You can also read her blog at <http://giveherwings.com/index.html>.